Embracing the Struggle

“The participants in this program fought hard to be there. They were dealing with a lot—the loss of loved ones, struggling to feel “okay,” worrying about their kids. But they didn’t let these challenges define them.

They became apprentices, pipefitters, women working towards a higher education and a career. They are fighting for a better future. This was a rigorous training covering two skill areas, but the outcomes will be that much more profound for them.”

— Molly Kruger, Cheyenne Program Director

“[In the past], I felt that “advocate” had just become a label, but not with [CLIMB] staff. Your determination, hard work, compassion, and support has changed our lives.”
