BOLD NEW STEPS

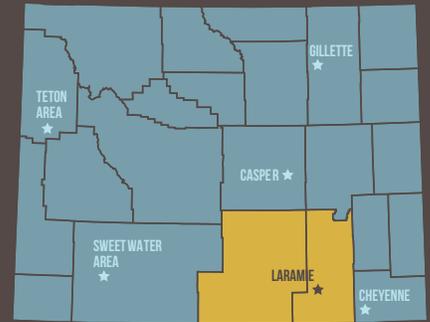

“This group of women came to Climb really motivated to reshape their lives for one reason or another. They showed an incredible amount of resilience and resourcefulness and mastered valuable executive functioning skills to handle the chaos and challenges of everyday life.

“I learned that I could get pushed out of my comfort zone, and I was stretched. To my surprise, I am thriving and doing really well.”

— Jamie, Program Participant

In particular, they made great strides in planning and decision making. They realized the value of stepping back, slowing down, and taking the time to make important decisions in life. Having these critical tools has a positive impact on their children and allows them to pave new paths for their families.”

I'm excited to announce that I've moved into a statewide leadership role at Climb Wyoming. I'm thrilled to share what I've learned in our great community with the rest of the state. Climb's Laramie program is honored to welcome Martha Doyle as our new director. Martha and I have been collaborating closely in this transition, and I look forward to our continued work together and with all of you to support the success of so many single mothers in our community. I hope to see you around town!
